

Local named to head up Campus Living Villages in New Zealand

With Campus Living Villages' interests in New Zealand expanding, the company has appointed respected and well-known student accommodation professional, Janet Thompson, as its General Manager of Operations in that country.

Having joined Campus Living Villages (CLV) from the New Zealand University sector in 2005, Ms Thompson has extensive experience in tertiary education and student accommodation, as well as a strong background in senior management within the public service.

"We are pleased to announce this appointment which will continue to strengthen our strong partnerships with universities in New Zealand. Janet's passion for student accommodation along with her energy, drive and forward thinking will benefit both the students and universities we are working with," said CLV Director of Operations, Tim Weston.

Ms Thompson's expertise in student accommodation includes strategic development, operational management, student facilities and services, pastoral care and events.

"Campus Living Villages is committed to adding to the overall student experience. Our dedication to high quality accommodation and student life programs significantly enhances a student's enjoyment of tertiary study and life on campus. These are factors which help attract students to individual Universities," said CLV General Manager of Operations, New Zealand, Janet Thompson.

Campus Living Villages specialises in the integrated development, financing and long-term operation of purpose-built accommodation for university students, and is committed to providing the most exciting, safe and supportive residential environments for students in Australia and New Zealand.

Working in partnership, CLV helps universities meet their increasing need for student accommodation. CLV is a leader in the field of student housing, owning and/or managing close to 7,000 beds in Australia and New Zealand, with a further 20,000 owned and/or managed by Campus Living Villages Century in the United States.
